Dearest

father) I have received your kind, and fatherly letter: kind in that thereby you advertise me of things necessary for maintenance which I was to receive, and according to your letter have received; fatherly in that you by a fatherly admonition command a reformation of a thing amiss, to wit, the form of my writing, which if I had known before I could easily have altered, and hence forth will daily show that I can easily change it, neither will I thereby any more show a barren invention. Thus fearing lest with my prolixity I may molest, your more serious cogitations, or incur your displeasure, giving you hearty thanks for that I have at this time received, & with the remembrance of my humble duty unto you, I humbly take my leave, and rest.

Oxford the 22th
of April. 1622:/
Your dutiful and obedient
son. William Bagot./
