I returnd not tyll yesternight, from my expensive iourney to Newmarket. Where I haue receyvd fro y^e Kinge, as good allowance, and encoragement to pursue my purpose, as I could desire. Whilst I was there, I found y^t my L: chamber= lane, refus'd to swear a Gent: into a place of Grolme of y^e chamber, after he had bargaind for yt, because he was a Servant to my L: of Canterbury. Thys, and some other lights make me see, that matters stand not so well between them, but y^t they are likely to oppose one anothers dependants. Before I go about to seeke my L: of Canterbury, I would gladly, if I could, discern e hys inclination to me, and if whether he haue any coniecture upon my relatiō to my L: chamberl: w^{ch} ^he ys very likely to haue come to hys knowledge, since my goinge, by reason of hys Lps more open avowinge me, then heretofore. If therefore, yo^w haue taken any occasion to speake wth hys Grace, since I desired y^t fauer of yo^w, and haue perceyvd any thinge therby, w^{ch} yo^w thinke fytt y^t I should know before y^r comminge hether, I humbly besecche yo^w to let me understand it, when any Servant of y^rs hath occasion to come to London: y^t I may use my best meanes of disposing hym towards yt. My L: chamb: hath layd hys commandement upon y^e M^r of Requests, to forbear to move y^e k: in y^e other busines, for any man; though I saw y^e Byll, for y^e kings hande, and saw y^t it was styll earnestly pursued out of yorkhouse. Hys Lp hath assurd me, that yt shall sleepe, tyll I move hym to sett yt afoote hereafter, when my Sonne, or any for mee ^{may}^ haue profit therby. Wth w^{ch} purpose I wyll acquaint my L: chancelor, and humbly in-treat hym, y^t it may be so. And so, s^r, wth my humble duty to yo^w, and yo^r poore daughters, I leave yo^w to our most blessed Sa= uyor.

yours euer to be comāded

I: Donne.

At my poore house.
